Course Title: ICH 510103 Current Topics in Brazil

Number of Credits: 02

Professor: Carmen Rial (and invited professors)

Ementa:

Course Description: This course is offered by the PPGICH's professors and invited ones from other departments to students of the Graduate courses of UFSC and special students. The focus of the course based on seminars will be on the relationship between various conceptions of and attitudes toward research, and recent theories of interpretations and hermeneutical practices in the research in human sciences in Brazil, emphasizing their insertion into a theoretical field of study and in an interdisciplinary perspective. We will consider the working in progress of the professors invited to give lectures. It aims to introduce the students in the different fields of studies of and in Brazil.

Teaching methodology: Lectures of the professors followed by discussion, seminar on texts previously indicated.

Course Grading: Participation in the debates and writing a review of book to be indicated by the lecturer.
